ADVENTURES OF TARZAN

From the story THE RETURN OF TARZAN by Edgar Rice Burroughs

Adapted by Robt. F. Hill and Lillian Valentine.

Episode #5 "Flames of Hate"

Directed by Robt. F. Hill

Continuing from Lap-over, Tarzan with the swiftness of a Puma rolls to one side as the Lion passes over him, the Lion going into the water, the alligators devouring him.

Jane regains consciousness and horror is written all over her face as she finds herself in the arms of the Ape. She gasps and loses consciousness again.

Cutting to Rokoff and the Arabs, Rokoff discovers that the Ape is gone and orders the Arabs to get their guns and search for him.

Tarzan returns to the tree where he has left Jane, and finds her gone. He is furious and scenting the smell of the Ape, trails it on.

Rokoff and Arabs continuing their search, discover the Ape and start after him. Rokoff comes on to the Ape first and tries to take Jane from him. He refuses to let Jane go, when Rokoff attacks him. He drops Jane and fights Rokoff. While they are fighting, one of Arabs raises his gun and shoots the Ape. Rokoff picks Jane up and with the rest of the Arabs goes back to the camp, leaving the Ape unconscious on the ground. Upon reaching the Camp, Rokoff calls for ink and paper, and copies the map of Opar from Jane's shoulders using synthetic ink. The Arabian doctor then erases the map from Jane's back with some preparation that he has, saying that it will remain invisible for only a short while. He then tries to stop Jane's fever, by giving her some medicine.

Cutting back to Tarzan, he continues his search for Jane, when he comes on to the unconscious form of the Ape. Tarzan carries him to the water's edge and binds his wounds and revives him, so he can make him talk and tell him of the whereabouts of Jane. The Ape is surprised and very grateful to Tarzan and then tells him about Rokoff and the many men with fire, Tarzan is astounded at this news and starts on with the Ape who has now become Tarzan's devoted slave.

The English forging party continue their search, when Professor spies Tarzan and the Ape at the Water's edge and they all hurry forward to greet him. Tarzan and Ape hear the approaching of humans, and flee in the trees. The English party call to Tarzan and he recognizes them. He quickly lowers himself and explanations follow. Tarzan then tells them that the best thing they can do is to return to the shore and keep a lookout for sign off the outer world as they are not safe in the Jungle. They all agree with him and leave to go toward the shore. Tarzan and the Ape continue on in the direction taken by Rokoff and the Arabs.

Cutting back to the Arabian camp, Jane comes to and hears Rokoff explaining to the Arabs about the City of Opar and that with their guns they can overpower the People of Opar and take their gold and their women.

After hours of searching, Tarzan pauses in the crook of a great tree and scans the surrounding thicket. He thinks a moment, and then tells the Ape that the Arabs will be compelled to make camp for the night and orders the Ape off in one direction while he takes the opposite, they agreeing to give their yell if they find Rokoff and his Confederates.

At the Arabian Camp all is quiet, as most of the men are asleep. Jane is slowly getting over the effects of the fever and watches for an opportunity to escape.

Cutting to the Jungle, we see our friend, the Elephant, with his head in the air, scenting a friend. Laboriously he starts forward and finally he approaches the Arabs camp. Cautiously making his way through an opening he spies Jane. The guard nearest Jane awakens and seeing the elephant, raises his gun but doesn't get the chance to use his gun as the elephant lifts him up bodily and throws him into the brush. The Elephant then picks up Jane and carries her back in his trunk through the Jungle.

Tarzan and the Ape each on their separate way looking for Jane, when the Ape pauses against the trunk of a tree to pick some fruit. As he does so, a Boa Constrictor crawls stealthily down over his shoulders and body and encircles him. The constrictor starts crushing the body of the Ape whose yells rent the air. Tarzan hears the yell and thinks the Ape has discovered the whereabouts of Rokoff and hastens in the direction of the call. He discovers the Ape in the clutches of the constrictor and with his knife kills the constrictor and saves the Ape and carries him off in the trees.

In the meantime, the guard has recovered and starts shooting after the elephant, awakening the rest of the Arabs. They are all excited after they hear the Guard's tale of the Elephant and start off in pursuit.

The Elephant races through the Jungle with Jane and as he sees Tarzan and the Ape in the trees above, drops Jane gently to the ground and gives his yell. Tarzan hears the call and with the Ape drops from the trees, and to his delight sees Jane.

Rokoff, the Frenchman and the Arabs spy the elephant in the distance and the men are about to shoot when Rokoff stops them, telling them that he has a better plan than to shoot as that would give them away that they killed Tarzan and Jane. Rokoff then orders the men to start fires all around and race for the river. The men disperse following directions.

Tarzan, Jane and Bull Ape all happy, start along trail to the Ocean, as Tarzan sees the Jungle burst into flames. Taking Jane in his arms, he swings into the trees that he may make more speed.

The Arabs cross the river with Rokoff and the Frenchman in the lead.

Animals are scurrying through the Jungles in fear, while flames surround Tarzan and the Ape. The tree that they are on, starts burning at the base and crashes over with them, into a hell of flame, as we finish the episode.
